Yvette Herrell

December 31, 2020 · 🌐

Today, Congresswoman-elect Yvette Herrell announced that she will object to the certification of the 2020 presidential election on January 6th.

Exercising the same right that House Democrats did after the 2004 and 2016 elections, Herrell will object in order to shed light on the numerous cases of irregularities and unlawful procedures used by several state governments during the election. In battleground states like Pennsylvania and Michigan, unilateral state government action was taken without legislative approval to unlawfully change voting rules and procedures by, among other things, extending the absentee ballot deadlines, relaxing signature and identity verification requirements, and mailing millions of unsolicited absentee ballot requests.

Herrell's vote will also call attention to the election meddling by Big Tech and the media who censored truthful stories about Joe Biden's concerning financial ties to foreign countries through his son Hunter while simultaneously being all too eager to spread damaging misinformation about President Trump.

"Millions of Americans feel like this election was not conducted with integrity and fairness," said Herrell. "As a member of the US House of Representatives, it is my duty to give the people a voice and ensure that legitimate concerns over the integrity of the presidential election are thoroughly heard and examined."

On Wednesday I plan to join dozens of my colleagues in objecting to electors from several states. Here's why:

Why I Object

With so much disingenuous reporting and misinformation on this process and what it means, I want to set the record straight.

On Wednesday, January 6, I plan to join more than 100 representatives and at least 12 senators by objecting to electors from several states where voting rules and procedures were drastically changed at the last minute. Those irregularities have cast doubts in the hearts of many New Mexicans I represent. It is my duty to give those constituents a voice and to raise their concerns to the fullest extent my office allows. By objecting to certain electors on Wednesday, I can help ensure all Americans have confidence in the integrity and fairness of future elections.

I told @krqe today I don't believe invoking the 25th or going through a second impeachment is really healthy for the nation. I think it puts fuel on the fire and I'm not in favor of that.

In a brief floor speech Wednesday, Herrell again argued that both Democratic and Republican leaders were responsible for political violence and said, "I don't believe, Madam Speaker, that the American people have an appetite for this."

I voted NO on Nancy Pelosi's impeachment of our President Donald J. Trump. We were all disgusted by last week's violence at the Capitol, and I immediately stood up to denounce it. There is simply no place for political violence in America - on the right or the left. (1/3)

Replying to @Yvette4congress

But the Democrat's rush to impeach the President - again - is simply creating more partisan division at a time when our country needs unity more than ever. (2/3)

Yvette Herrell ✓ @Yvette4congress · Jan 13

I was proud to stand with President Trump today. But Congress should be focused on issues that matter to hardworking American families instead of playing political games. I hope Nancy Pelosi figures that out so we can get to the real work in front of us. (3/3)
